PRESENTER
LISA A. SCOTT, PhD, CCC-SLP

Lisa A. Scott, PhD, CCC-SLP, is Director of Clinical Education and Research Associate in the School of Communication Science and Disorders at Florida State University. She holds the Certificate of Clinical Competence from the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association and is licensed as a speech-language pathologist by the Florida Department of Health. At FSU, she serves as the clinic’s HIPAA privacy officer and she maintains an active clinical practice by providing services to clients who stutter. In addition to directing the clinical education program, she teaches courses in stuttering, counseling and professional issues. Her teaching has been recognized twice by FSU, having been awarded an Excellence in Undergraduate Teaching Award in 2007 and an Excellence in Graduate Teaching Award in 2012.

Outside of her work at FSU, Dr. Scott serves as the Vice President for Professional Practices for the Stuttering Foundation of America; is a former coordinator for the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association’s Special Interest Group 10, Issues in Higher Education; and is a consultant for the Florida Agency for Healthcare Administration’s Bureau of Medicaid Services. She also consults on HIPAA privacy issues with other university speech and hearing clinics. Her research interests are in the relation between stuttering and language production, the application of cognitive-behavioral therapy to stuttering treatment, and the clinical supervision process.

Dr. Scott was a member of the Inaugural Board-Recognized Certified Fluency Specialists; has made numerous presentations at district, state and national meetings; and co-authored several publications in the areas of fluency disorders and clinical supervision. She volunteers as an academic accreditation site visitor for the Council on Academic Accreditation, American-Speech-Language-Hearing Association; as the Vice President for Professional Development for the Council of Academic Programs in Communication Sciences and Disorders; and for the Leon County Chapter of the American Cancer Society’s Reach to Recovery program.

Disclosure Statements: Dr. Scott receives a salary from the University of Florida. Dr. Scott’s nonfinancial relationships include board membership, volunteer consulting and speaking and volunteer membership on advisory and review boards listed above.
