What does the SNAP-Ed do?

Help individuals, families and children:

- Enjoy more fruits and vegetables
- Increase physical activity
- Choose and prepare nutritious meals and snacks
- Develop budgeting, shopping and cooking skills
- Use safe food handling, preparation and storage practices

What are participants saying?
“I used what I learned on portion distortion to change the way I eat and I lost weight.”

“I rarely cook but this Stir Fry recipe is easy enough for me to try.”

“I’m using what I learned to save at the grocery store.”

What is SNAP-Ed?

The SNAP-Ed is the Kansas Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Education Program (SNAP-Ed). It offers free nutrition education for individuals, families, youth and seniors who qualify for food assistance. Funding is provided by the Food and Nutrition Service (FNS) of the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) through a contract with the Department of Children and Families (DCF), formerly SRS. This program is administered and implemented by K-State Research and Extension. Extension educators provide nutrition education in their counties in partnership with community agencies and organizations.

"Make the healthy choice the easy and affordable choice."
Regina Benjamin, former Surgeon General

The Wyandotte County SNAP-Ed Offers:

Workshops:

"Eat Healthy, Be Active", an interactive 6-part series based on the 2010 Dietary Guidelines and 2008 Physical activity Guidelines, is designed to take participants from just “thinking” to “taking” their desired health actions.

"Eating Smart and Moving More"*, a 4-part series, challenges participants to make positive changes to achieve good nutrition, increase physical activity, practice food resource management skills, and practice proper food safety techniques.

*Also available in Spanish

"Kansans Move into Health", is an 8-class series begins with a personal assessment and teaches participants to overcome berries that derail their health and fitness goals, including eating out, portion control and emotional eating.
